The Organizing Committee cordially invites you to Zagreb to take part in the 22nd Ljudevit Jurak International Symposium on Comparative Pathology. All pathologists dealing with human and animal pathology are invited to present their work concerning human and animal pathology or both. The main topic of this symposium is Pathology of the skin. All papers regarding other symposium sections are also welcome (see program). The goal of this symposium is to promote multidisciplinary approach to human and animal pathology. We hope that you will enjoy the scientific program as well as the social events. We also hope that you will find some free time to enjoy our beautiful city and its surroundings.

Zagreb (<http://www.zagreb.hr>) is the capital of Croatia, one of the oldest European countries. The city is more than nine hundred years old. # Prof. Dr. Ljudevit Jurak 1881/1945

Prof. Dr. Ljudevit Jurak was born on October 6, 1881 in the Zalug district of Hum on the Sutla River in Croatia, the son of Stjepan and Amalia (nee Pregelhofer). He completed elementary school in the village of Prisljin in the district of Hum and graduated from high school in Zagreb in 1902 with honours. As an excellent student, he was awarded a scholarship to the Medical Faculty of the University of Innsbruck from which he graduated in 1910. He married Helene Hanke from Innsbruck and his son Herman was born in Innsbruck on August 24, 1910.

Dr. Jurak began his medical career at the Department of Pathology of the Medical Faculty of the University of Innsbruck under Professor Pomer, to whom he was appointed as an Assistant (to the Professor) in 1911. He specialised in pathology and anatomy until 1914, and also co-operated with Professor Ipsen from the Institute of Forensic Medicine in Innsbruck. On November 24, 1913, he was appointed coroner for the Zagreb Health Service at the Sestre milosrdnice University Hospital in Zagreb. In October 1920, he was appointed to the position of Professor of Pathology and Anatomy at the Veterinary Faculty of Zagreb University. Following this appointment he continued to work as an honorary coroner in the Sestre milosrdnice University Hospital in Zagreb until 1945. Prior to this appointment he completed studies in animal pathology and anatomy at the Veterinary Faculty of Vienna University under Professor Hartl and at the Veterinary Faculty of Dresden University under Professor Joest. Between the two World Wars, he practised animal and human pathology and anatomy and in 1922 was awarded an honorary Assistant Professorship of Forensic Medicine at the Medical Faculty of Zagreb University. The first lectures in Forensic Veterinary Medicine were given in the school year 1923/24. The first lecturer was prof. Ljudevit Jurak. The main Jurak's scientific contribution was pathohistological description of Lev's disease half a century before Lev. Professor Jurak was the dean of the Veterinary Faculty of Zagreb University in 1929/30 and in 1937/38 and vicedean in 1938/39. Prof. Jurak's tragedy began in 1943 when he became a member of the Red Cross International Committee for the investigation of killings of the Polish officers in the Katynian forest and Ukrainian citizens in Vinnica. The forensic investigation of the victims' remains at both locations determined that the Soviet Secret Services (NKVD) were responsible for the killings of these innocent victims. Due to the fallout his truthful testimony would create with respect to Yugoslav relationship to the Soviet Union, he was executed by the communist authorities in Zagreb on June 10, 1945.

In 1990, on the initiative of Professors Mladen Belicza and Križan Čuljak, the Departments of Pathology of the Veterinary Faculty of Zagreb University and Sestre milosrdnice University Hospital established an annual international memorial symposium on comparative pathology dedicated to Professor Jurak. In 1991, the Department of Pathology at the Sestre milosrdnice University Hospital in Zagreb was renamed the "Ljudevit Jurak" University Department of Pathology. Since 1996, Academy of Medical Sciences of Croatia has supported this symposium. Since 1999, Symposium is held under the auspices of European Society of Pathology. In 1998, the "Ljudevit Jurak" Award for Comparative Pathology was created, which, it is hoped, will encourage scientists from around the world to compare animal and human diseases and remember Professor Jurak's contribution to the medical, forensic and veterinary sciences and to medical ethics.
